One go to box, compartments w/ foam in the lid goes in the shirt pocket. Cycle out the dries I expect to need depending on time of year, keep the lid filled with nymphs, wets and a couple streamers. Right now it's got midges, BWO's, sulphurs, some caddis and a few ants/beetles. I don't organize the compartments beyond trying to keep the same sized flies in the same compartments, don't bother keeping comparduns/catskills/parachutes separated for each bug. All the dry BWO's go together, the emergers in another spot for example. Come to think of it, probably don't have them sorted to well by size either, not much difference between an 18 or a 20, I can pick out what I need when I need it...

Keep another similar box in the bag and that's pretty much all I carry on stream.
