You are absolutely correct and it's not even a discussion.

Having said that, the US will always (well ~ 30 years or so) be afraid of nuclear power for completely irrational reasons. So let's fool these bitches, call it cold super funky fusion fission (tm) and have Justin Bieber sing the catch tune on all of the commercials, reduce electric generation rates by 25% and call it a day!

Speaking strictly for myself, I do have a fear of nuclear power, and I'm not sure it's irrational. For the record, it's not the technology I fear. The problem is it will be built, operated and maintained by corporations where profit is the primary motive. The military has certainly demonstrated that nuclear power can be done safely. But I seriously doubt they run a cost/benefit analysis on maintenance or upgrades.
