We actually had a conversation with the owner of that property (next to the small parking area) when we were up last weekend. He doesn't live down there, but lives up above. He expressed concerns about that lot getting parked up and the ability of emergency vehicles to get back into the houses that are below the parking area. He said he also had people parking in that yard which was destroying the grass, etc.

I can only imagine the madness that occurs during the green drakes and how frustrating it is for some of the property owners.
