

---

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : More brookie streams that no one fishes

Re: More brookie streams that no one fishes

Author: : troutbert

Date: : 2013/5/25 16:09:18

URL:

Quote:

k-bob wrote:

I think brookies can live in very step streams with pools that fall almost like steps on a ladder. Have walked some very steep streams with such " ladder rung pools " at spawning, and brookies were in all the pools. I don't know how they do it

thanks for the pictures comments and PM's I think they are instructive

some swampiness may lead to tannic water so Brookies not Browns

Too much swampiness may lead to water that is too warm for brook trout and too tannic for brown trout?

There are tannic streams with wild brown trout. Two examples are Black Moshannon Creek and Drury Run.