Must be a perfect day across the state. I envy you all. Just a year or so ago, I fished every chance I got. Now, I am fishing too little. I miss watching the hatches, chasing the risers, guessing the patterns, and tricking the trouts. Have any of you long-time fly anglers ever gone through a slump where "getting out" just wasn't as important as it once was? Is this the beginning of a more selective career or will the funk pass and the old enthusiasm be renewed? If you had to burst out of such a slump, how did you do it? Just do it?
