Went through a similar stretch about 3 years ago. I so enjoyed preparing for a day on the water the night before only to find myself doing anything but fishing the next day. No apparent physical issue, I just wasn't doing the things that once brought my joy. It was driving me crazy. It was as though my backside could not escape the magnetic field on my favorite recliner.

After friends and family expressed concern about my health, I went to see my doctor. He told me I had low T (testosterone deficiency). Since getting on medication, my activity level is better and I feel 10 years younger.
