

Subject: : Hatch and Entomology Forum

Topic: : Saw These on Deer Creek in MD

Re: Saw These on Deer Creek in MD

Author: : Maurice

Date: : 2013/5/27 10:36:41

URL:

Thats some sort of Cahill spinner, female, or some other obscure Stenonema species. Or perhaps in the Heptageniidae family like the march brown is now.

Clear, mottled wings, barred legs, two tails.

The White Fly (Epheron leukon) is all white with smokey white wings. And since they molt into spinners in mid flight immediately after hatching its dark or dusk when you see them.....and you don't have a handfull of them either.