With todays lovely weather I have been inspired to ask the community what they feel about this.

I've never really flyfished in the rain but I've had some crazy high action days bait and spin fishing. Wondering how you all feel about hitting the water, how the fish act, and WHAT ARE THEY BITIN ON?? in this type of weather and murky water conditions.

I'm asking cause, well obviously I wanna fish, and I got into some good ear chewin with a FF buddy this weekend and he ended up giving me a bunch of flies he tied himself. Included were three scuplin flies he says he has success with, any chance these things might do the trick today as long as the water isn't chocolate milk brown yet???
