Streams are in valleys. Lightning strikes tall structures on mountaintops. Count the seconds between flash and thunder and when it gets short, go sit down under the canopy of a tree at least 20 feet distant. Snug up your raincoat, set the rod against the distant tree, tilt your head down. And wait it out. You drove an hour or more to get there, don't waste it.

This is the epitome of bad advice

It isn't bad advice, just not paranoid advice. I suppose I should say that in the most severe situations, follow afish's guidance. Otherwise, follow mine and you'll be back to fishing in no time.
