If FCP is right, and fish hold over (I don't doubt that), and more would hold over if people stopped harvesting them, I wonder if the Tully couldn't benefit from a no-fishing season from say, July 1 through the end of August. I'm sure plenty of fish die too from dudes who go, fish 72 degree water, and practice "good C&R".

PS-I can think of a few other streams that could benefit from a closed season as well. Lititz Run and Kettle Creek, just off the top of my head.
