Some of my best days have been in the rain. Fished all day Tuesday. It rained from 10:30-3:30. The water came up a bit and was very slightly off color. 30 minutes after the rain stopped, it was amazing. If it's possible to have blanket hatches of the following bugs...we did. drakes, march browns, grey fox, sulphurs from #14-20, tiny olives by the billions, golden stones and iso's. When the weather looks sh#tty, I'm heading to the water of I get the chance.

When there are like half a dozen things hatching, how do you decide what to try? Observation? Process of elimination?
