

Subject: : Warm Water & Salt Water Fly-Fishing

Topic: : Silly carp, youre not a salmon

Re: Silly carp, youre not a salmon

Author: : phiendWMD

Date: : 2013/5/31 14:32:51

URL:

Earlier this week I saw a bunch of carp trying to jump up a ledge, that goes to a tunnel, which goes under the road then up to a lock. A few made it to onto the ledge, but as they approached the tunnel, which is mostly covered with a huge metal lid, they would get washed back down. A couple weeks ago the same spot was full of shad.

Interestingly enough, in the same spot a couple weeks before that, around mid April, they were stocking trout in the water with the lock. The tunnel was clogged up. So they opened the lock, less than 100 feet from where they were putting the trout. They were trying to blast the branches and all out of the tunnel. I sort of jokingly told the borough guy they were gonna let all the trout escape. A day or two later, I saw a rainbow trying to jump back up the ledge. The water was lower then and it couldn't quite make it.