In the end, fly tying is an art form and folks can pursue the hobby for practical or entirely aesthetic and intrinsic reasons. May of us do it for both reasons. It's all good. And Eunan's flies will certainly catch fish.....although I'd frame 'em rather than fish 'em.

Some years ago, just for kicks, I took several classic style streamers that I'd tied to be framed (they were mostly feather wing streamers with real jungle cock eyes) and fished 'em for a day on the Breeches. The trout smashed 'em. I found that they had a poor hook-up ratio but they looked very nice in the water and the fish definitely agreed. Needless to say, after getting chewed on, they were not fit to frame so I stuck 'em in a fence post by the parking lot. 😊
