Scott rods are not too soft for me, as outsider feels, but they are way too expensive for me. Don't get me wrong, they probably make one of the top three glass rods going today. But at almost $700, I can resist. There are a couple of good small scale rod builders that make rods just as nice as the Scott, one of the are from PA:

Not sure if you bought the rod yet but I would be wary of a 2 wt. I use a 6' 5wt on little mountain streams. Lowest I have is a 4 wt. You want a rod that loads quickly on those streams so you don't have to do a bunch of flase casting over the fish. Also better for roll casting. If there is a little breeze, forget about it.
