I've been tying the nail-less nail knot for years without failure. I do coat the knot with UV knot sense to make an extra smooth connection so it doesn't get caught up in the guides. Once you try this knot you will never do a nail knot again with the tool. It's so easy it's ridiculous.

As far as tippet twisting I agree with the other posters about too small tippet with a larger fly. This has happened to me in my early days fly fishing a big spinner with too small of a tippet.

I would recommend the OP drop a tippet size but extend the length of the tippet. I really do think most people don't realize if you extend your tippet length you get such a better drag free drift. never start a day's fishing without 3 feet of tippet length.
