

Subject: : Gear Talk

Topic: : Switch Rod Set-up and Instruction

Re: Switch Rod Set-up and Instruction

Author: : turkey

Date: : 2013/6/4 10:05:16

URL:

Quote:

firstcap wrote:

Thanks for all of the feedback guys...I really appreciate the help. The grain window for the rod is 140-280, so Skip's recommendation of 265 sounds about right and should load the rod quickly. I am probably asking a lot out of this set-up wanting it to be a jack of all trades. Spey Clave guys rave about Steve Godshall lines. I think he helped develop the Rainshadow blanks and builds custom lines specific to how a guy wants to fish. Anyone have any experience with him?

You can't go wrong with Steve G. I fish a bunch of his lines. Calling him is your best bet, and allow yourself some time to talk because he is thorough. You won't be disappointed.

I don't know that rod you're fishing but I would forget about the Skagit style heads. I'd look at a scandi style head in the upper end of your grain window OR those Wulff Ambush lines are really nice. Also, Rio makes "Switch" lines but I have no experience with these.

Check out the Rajeff Sports videos on youtube as well.