

Subject: : Gear Talk

Topic: : Which mid level waders?

Re: Which mid level waders?

Author: : djs12354

Date: : 2013/6/4 19:37:30

URL:

I'll enter another vote for LL Bean

I had purchased a pair of their Emerger II series of breathable waders. (Due to a tight budget at the time) While walking streamside through some heavy brush, I fell and landed on a sharp stump from someone's brushcutting. Poked a nice hole in the waders. I used the kit that came with the waders and an Aquaseal repair kit to fix the puncture. No problems going forward and, when funds loosened up, I upgraded to the Bean's Rapid River waders.

Regulated the Emergers to backups until my brother had trouble with his waders. He used the Emergers a few times, but there was trouble with a leak in the non-patched leg.

I called LL Bean and explained the situation to customer service. They said to send the waders in and they would replace them. Just got a call from them today and the new waders are on the way.

The customer service person said they had some issues with that model and if I had any problems, to contact them right away and they would deal with any issues I had.

Great customer service from the Bean and great products.