

---

Subject: : Gear Talk

Topic: : Vest/Pack Organization

Re: Vest/Pack Organization

Author: : ryguyfi

Date: : 2013/6/5 12:38:22

URL:

I honestly think the solution is about 3 solutions. Different packs/vests for different fishing situations.

I pack very light when fishing for brookies. Small waist pack that holds tippet, floatant, 2 fly boxes, and a bottle of water. Have zingers on the outside for nippers and hemos. That's it.

Average day should be something fairly light, but not too bulky (sling pack). Just put in there what you need for the day. Example is a spinnerfall. You only need a single fly box and many of the same items as I use for brookies. Maybe enough room for some food and a headlamp.

All day trip, don't know what you'll need - that's your big pack/vest with all the zippers and compartments. Carry everything as well as food, water, raincoat, bug spray, etc.

Just make sure you check everything before you head for water or you'll have it in one of your other packs.