Lots of opinions here... For small wild fish in small streams it is imho great fun and very easy to cast #12 adams dry flies with a two weight rod overlined with a good three weight fly line. Two weights are not for weighted flies, big fish, high wind, large flies, or large water. Right they are not versatile. None of which matters in a lot of Pennsylvania small stream fishing. ... As pat said,being able to shoot line in short casts is helpful.

I match gear to fishing and streams, and have never run into a really big brown trout when fishing a two wt fly rod.
