I think it's still too early, last time they were around here in the western prairie part of the state, it was late june into july. I was out mt biking last week just north of me and heard them in the woods, so they ARE starting.

I agree I would wait until later in the month before declaring it a bust. In 2008 I recall seeing only a few in early June, then two weeks later it was complete chaos in the same area.
