Warmouth: Extremely rare in SE Pa. To my knowledge, biologists have identified one in the past 30 yrs., and that was just recently. There may have been others over the past 30 yrs, but I know of only one. I have seen one or two in my career, both in Southwestern Pa.

Lake Galena biologist report: The species list in the report was based on sampling that was not complete or intended to be complete for all species. The list was based only on the trap net catch. Additionally, Galena's water source was expanded in the 1980's and new species introductions can occur independently of agency or angler introductions.
