I have learned not to use or lose too many flies on an outing. So, to me, under a dollar is my pricepoint. I don't know this company, but 40c a fly means they are scrimping somewhere, on materials or labor. If they suit your purpose, that's fine, but I would hate to hook a fish of a lifetime and have a hook break over a dollar or so.

A 25% defect rate is way too much. Maybe inspect the flies when they arrive and return and demand refund on defects. Or where the defects are repairable, repair them. The hook quality, though cannot be repaired.
