I am neither surprised, nor impressed with the performance of a fly beyond the exact conditions that produced the success. Trout are not really very smart. As I have expressed in the past, I think their selectivity is due to their stupidity, not to their "intelligence." A lesson learned: you never know what pattern will work, but you can guess. And the more variations you have, the greater your chance of finding the right one.

If you get the link fixed, I guaranty some of us will be tying a handful. 🤪

PS, does it come in a dry version, or at least a soffthackle?
