I think it's still too early, last time they were around here in the western prairie part of the state, it was late june into july. I was out mt biking last week just north of me and heard them in the woods, so they ARE starting.

I agree I would wait until later in the month before declaring it a bust. In 2008 I recall seeing only a few in early June, then two weeks later it was complete chaos in the same area.

I have to agree it was late June when I last saw this cicada, I had actually never seen this kind of hatch and when I arrived at our camping area the first thing I said when I got out of the truck was, " What is that awful noise"
