I'm really surprised by some of the responses - I (unsuccessfully apparently) tried to illustrate the fact that he left trash on the bank. How many others on this board have commented on trash that they pick up left by other fishermen. I suppose the nature of fly fishing is that we do not generate trash.

I was a spin fisherman for years, like many on this board, but I NEVER left trash on the bank - never. If that makes me an elitist fly fisherman, then I'm guilty as charged.

Pennypack, I think you misunderstood my comment - I thought 50 yards well more than courteous. The guy that stepped in between me and my buddy was NOT being courteous.
