

Subject: : Gear Talk

Topic: : Reel Question

Re: Reel Question

Author: : WildTigerTrout

Date: : 2013/6/10 22:25:13

URL:

Quote:

pcray1231 wrote:

It's just an educated guess, but I'm thinking that fish in his avatar was from a mountain stream and probably landed in 10 seconds or something. If it is exhausted, it's from examining closely and taking many pictures, which I will excuse him from, since it's a freakin tiger!!!! If I caught a wild tiger, yeah, I think I'd go all out on the gawking and picture side of things. Don't worry, it wasn't going to reproduce anyway!

Actually, that wild tiger was caught during the summer in an unstocked limestone. I landed it with my Sage SLT 8'6" 4 weight with 5X tippet on a size 12 Harry Steeves crystal butt cricket I tied myself. Landed it pretty quickly, snapped several photos and put him back in the water, no worse for the wear. BTW the fish is not exhausted it's smiling because he is about to become a star! 