To make a long story short, the gear or the clothing does not make the angler.

While this is true most of the time, the person described in the OP sounds like the type of person who doesn't have any interest in doing things the right way (poorly clothed/no boots), and this more than likely applies to his fishing ethics, or lack there of. jmo

Doing things the right way? OK, I might agree with that based on actual observed actions, comments made, cutting in... but then you decided to get specific and zero in on appearance and turned it into a load of crap.

Check out this #censor#. If he were holding a rock bass and a cheap spinning rod instead of a smallmouth and cheap fly rod, would you think differently of him?

I often wet wade, and it sounds to me like the OP didn't actually observe the guy littering. He only saw the angler and the litter and assumed they were once attached.

So allow me to change my earlier response. The gear and the clothing does not make the angler.
