I agree with your frustration. Again, just an observation.

Two instances come to mind:

On a local FFO, some guy with a fly rod walked up to the stream about 30 feet above me, perched on a rock above the plungepool and began working his #6 wooly bugger through the run. I had been patiently casting from the rear of the run into the current tongue.

On a local all tackle trophy trout section of river, I was casting to a single riser, that looked like a nice fish. Some guy approaches from the other side and starts casting to the exact same fish, with a streamer.

Both times I made a comment about the proximity and they both reacted as if I was crazy to think that way.
