Only one trip to the Tully this year and that was on Good Friday. Fished a stretch below Reber's just upstream from the Refrigerator Hole. Got bored after awhile catching stockies on wooly buggers. A mix of browns and rainbows. They were nice size and appearance for stockies. Nothing really remarkable about it so I'm curious to know what might be different.

Took a quick glance at the Tully on my drive to work this morning. Looks like it dropped overnight but is still high and off color. It was blown out Monday. With more rain on the way will probably go way up again.
