Yeah, tricos. That's a little on the early side for them, but not out of the question. Spring Creek has em, I'm sure some of the others as well. Early to mid-morning intense spinner fall with tiny mayflies. On sunny days, they fall as soon as the fog burns off, which can be anytime from 6:30 to 9:30 or so. On cloudy or drizzly days, they sometimes are less intense, but over a longer time period, from morning right through the early afternoon.
