

---

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : It's snake time!

Re: It's snake time!

Author: : pcray1231

Date: : 2013/6/12 13:46:23

URL:

Quote:

are keyed into heat signatures and generally wouldn't strike at a human as a food source, but instead a defense mechanism.

I didn't mean to imply they would strike a human as a food source. I meant to imply that you can poke at em with a stick, and they probably won't bite the stick. And if they do try, they'll probably do an awful lot of missing.

But poke at em with your leg, and they probably will bite that, and not miss.

Still, a stick is useful just to get some sort of response, any movement at all is enough to alert you to their presence, which is all that is required.