

Subject: : Gear Talk

Topic: : The "Troutiest" of rods?

Re: The "Troutiest" of rods?

Author: : bikerfish

Date: : 2013/6/13 6:31:45

URL:

fiberglass flyrodders.

I'll say this about glass. lot's of folks are overlining graphite rods to get the rod to load and to FEEL the rod load, it also SLOWS down the rod. I've found this is not needed with glass rods, the ones I fish, and I have plenty, all feel good, load nicely, and cast wonderfully with the line weight they were designed for. once in a while on bigger waters, I'll underline a rod, allowing the rod to load with more line out than usual. for those that think glass is stupid, outdated, old fashioned and such, go try a modern glass rod and you just might be surprised. there are some great tapers, they are light, and they are just plain fun.