I grew up in snake country in central and north central PA. All kinds of 'em, rattlesnakes and copperheads included. I learned to fish and hunt with my dad and spent many, many hours in the woods and on streams with him. The one thing he pounded into my head was to always, ALWAYS watch where you put your hands and feet. That has served me quite well over the years. While I've not encountered a whole lot of rattlesnakes and copperheads, the ones I have seen in the woods or on a stream were ones I saw far enough in advance to avoid precisely because I'm scrupulous in following dad's dictum.
