I'm not much of a streamer guy. I do have several patterns that I don't think are technically streamers that work well when fished as streamers. Maybe this is an area where the fish are a bit more aggressive and something different can be a benefit. DC410 already mentioned one of my favorites in the Picket Pin. I also like the Casual Dress, and the Hornberg. The casual dress tied in a #10 or 12 makes a very good imitation of a small minnow. I'll dead drift through a hole, swing, and then short strip back along the edge of the hole. The Hornberg is a sort of fly of last resort for me these days, but it has saved a few days for me. One of my winter projects this year is going to be a set of classic bucktails.
