Where are you in Pittsburgh?

A friend of mine fished Neshannock yesterday and he didn't do that well. Low water and probably getting warm. I fished Cool Spring(in the Neshannock watershed) last week and caught a few trout but they were picky. Don't know how far you want to drive, but what about warmwater? I fished two warmwater rivers yesterday and did alright, but they're farther than Neshannock, although you may get some bass in there too.

I would say the Yough would be a good idea.

edit: Pcray posted while I was typing. I agree with him, and if you're willing to drive that far for trout(past Oil City/Franklin) I'd suggest also trying out the Allegheny, French Creek, or Oil Creek for bass. I've caught smallies in Tionesta Creek too. Shenango is a good option(one of the rivers I fished yesterday, it's a little high though but fishable and has great color).
