If you're into smallies, the swattie south of Pine Grove is quite thick with them and they didn't start hatching below town until early last week. They were north of town and in NW Dauphin county for weeks, then all of a sudden exploded between 81 and 443 in southern Schuylkill/ northern Lebanon counties. It's every bit as widespread in this area as it was in 96, maybe more, but this time around localized broods were staggered by a few weeks instead of all at once, creating the illusion of a "bust", but they are here and in the creeks.
