So the Army Corps position is that we will not let pool height exceed 1370 right? If they held more water back, then there would be more water for fishing AND rafting, and there wouldn't be as many fights over the white water surges. So, what does it take to get storage higher? Can the dam structurally take more storage? Is it at a federal/state law capacity limit? 26 miles of public water in a state park, before you even hit further south. What a renewable resource.
