DJ,

What Nikon are you using. I have a D7000 and it shoots decent video but it doesn't autofocus in video mode.

Although shooting with the 35 1.8 lense is great for video. To be honest if you want to shoot great video for a budget price, get the new gopro for $400 shoots 60 fps at 1080 plus a slew of other settings. Also I made a boom for mine that you can shoot underwater with or 10 feet out or above your head. Shoots great slow motion and the picture quality is very good. To be honest the D800 won't be too much better. except for full frame. The one thing I would make for your video efforts is a steady cam. Will improve your video quality 100X. You can make one for pretty cheap like $25. Just go on line and search steady cam....
