WBA is a fine place to stay. One thing, it's in NY State and you will need to purchase a NY license to fish the River there.

There is no access when staying at the Capra, but you can drive up or down and find access points all along the West Branch. Same true for the Mainstem, but it may be too warm for trout fishing, depending on the weather and dam releases.

The Delaware River is a very varied (lol) river. It's often not really a good idea to park and pound it. Things may be different around each bend and stretch of the river because of flow, temp, bugs, weeds, fish.... It's is often best to go up there with an open mind and fish different parts of the River depending on conditions. I often find the right spot is more important than the right fly or method (that's why Andy chooses to float 20miles+ a day....he's not as dumb as he looks!)

Have a good trip.
