I've used P-Line before steelhead fishing as a leader(spin fishing) once or twice. It worked fine and caught fish. I think I used in in 4 or 6lb.

From what I understand is it's not 100% fluorocarbon, but a "fluorocarbon coated" monofilament. At least the stuff I used. Either way I think it would work just fine as tippet material.

I actually find myself using Seaugar(or however you spell it) fluorocarbon a lot for my tippet fly fishing. I use it in 8lb streamer fishing, bass, carp, and steelhead fishing. Works great. I've even used the 8lb test during low water in medium sized stocked trout streams and caught fish. No need for 7x tippet LOL.
