I'll "spot burn", but the Lehigh Gorge is full of them. From just below Lehigh Tannery to at least Rockport, they are crossing the Lehigh and the fish are eating them willingly. The tricky part is (as Sbecker knows) is getting to them on the Lehigh... If you can access the banks, or are brave enough to float it, you can get on some nice fish.

Hickory Run SP is also full of them...

Coming down the NE Extension of the turnpike, they were all over the place just before the Blue Mountain tunnel heading south.

Yea I dunno if it was the time we floated, but fishing wasn't epic as I thought it would be. Picked up a few trout and some nice smallmouth. Whatever you do, do not float the upper gorge on Sunday afternoon when they decide to cut the flow back from 750cfs to 235cfs in a hard body drifter. The flow change might have had a major factor on the fishing.
