Nope. There's quite a few rods in the $750-1100 range.

I'm not hating, I just fall for the hype. My buddy tom was looking for a rod and I found the original hydros on closeout for $499. He went to the fly shop where the fast talking snake oil salesman sold him a new hydros 2 for $800. Is a rod that is 1/64 of an ounce lighter worth an additional $300? Not in my eyes. If his ability had outgrown the original hydros and the new one offered significant improvements in performance.....ok. I'll buy that but I'm 99% sure you let a guy cast a hydros and a hydros 2, they couldn't tell the difference.
