

---

Subject: : Hatch and Entomology Forum

Topic: : Bug ID

Re: Bug ID

Author: : sandfly

Date: : 2013/6/25 15:35:48

URL:

green drakes just don't come off in may/june. they hatch south to north moving from the southern states through the northern states. seems a liitle late for them there since they are in northern Ny now. You can follow just about any mayfly hatch from south to north and some would take a month or more from start to finish. If you are fishing high enough (altitude) they could still be hatching there. most people fish for them for a week then give up. chasing hatches (favorite) used to be the thing to do. start in southern pa and end up in new England. hendricksons, MB's, grakes were all the rave for awhile. Have a friend in Maine says the drakes are just starting now up there..