

Subject: : Beginner Forum

Topic: : simulated hatch

Re: simulated hatch

Author: : krayfish

Date: : 2013/6/25 21:03:28

URL:

If there's nothing hatching and you just blind cast, yes you can catch fish that way. Was it a simulated hatch? I'd say no. You might have been in an area with tricky currents that caused your fly to drag even if you didn't see it. There's also the chance that secession didn't hold many fish and when you moved....success! Could have made the impression on you that you spurred them into believing a hatch was going on. Trout are opportunist. They will eat what ever appears to be food. I'll put my 30+ years against a theory any day.