

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : What are your go to flies for this time of year?

Re: What are your go to flies for this time of year?

Author: : RLeeP

Date: : 2013/6/26 13:27:18

URL:

I've fished Crawford County a fair bit in my time...

Any place there (or in the surrounding counties, so long as we aren't talking about the Brokenstraw or Oil Creek or any of the other big, marginal streams of the area), you can do well all day on a simple split wing deerhair caddis in a #14 or #16. The tie is indentical to the Solomon/Leiser Delta Wing caddis except the wings are regular old deer hair: Here's the Solomon/Leiser pattern: <http://www.flyfishingconnection.com/p...flies/3/Delta+Wing+Caddis>

Tie these in a hare's ear body/brown hackle combo as well as a medium tan body/ barred or ginger variant hackle combo. With its clipped hackle bottom, this fly floats flush in the slower water. Yet the angled wings allow it to float as effectively as any Wulff or stimulator in the broken water and runs. This saves time pfarting around changing flies. They catch a lot of fish.

Other than that, I like big terrestrials, mostly ants.. I'm a believer in the bass bug theory of summer terrestrial fishing. The splat is very important, IMO.