Supposed to be getting rain Thursday thru Sat in inches. I saw 3 inches forecasted for certain parts of central Pa, and 1.6 for Wilkes-Barre, didn't notice what Carbon's was, but it is something.

Ticks were light up high in the Gorge for me in April and May, guess they picked up wherever you were. Supposedly takes up to 24 hours for a deer tick to transfer the bacteria from their gut into your blood to get it.

And.....I saw a card that gives you actual tick sizes and deer ticks are so small. The female deer tick, which is the larger of the sexes is the size of this letter > m < . Most of what I pick off me must be dog or wood ticks. But showering down after a trek and scraping your scalp with your finger nails and a ton of shampoo should dislodge them, if they are there in that supposed 24 hour window.
