Thanks for the concern guys...I'm ok 😬

Turned out there was a GFCI hidden between my wife's cooking utensil jar/holder thingy and where she keeps the olive oil jug on the counter...DUH! Thought it through some more and realized it basically had to be a GFCI downstream somewhere of the fridge outlet, which was the first on that circuit. Looked at the utensil thing and knew it without even having to move it. I don't think I ever knew that outlet was even there other than when I put up the tile backsplash and had to tile around it, and I don't think anything's ever been plugged into it. No worries, Swattie's alive and well!
