I would say that from G'burg, the best option would be Codorus Creek, TT Section. The water will be cold (very cold) and chances are the water level will be down which makes wading it that much easier. The last few times I've been there, portions of the stream bed have been exposed, so wading/walking hasn't been a challenge. The Hanover area has gotten hit with some decent rains lately, so it's possible the flow could be up a bit (higher dam release?). Hands down, the nice thing about the Codorus is it is a wild brown fishery and it stays cold all summer long. There are some stretches of the Codorus that are fairly easy to wade (improvement section, etc.).
