May try to get up there on July 4 if the flow and temps are good.

Is the Lehigh a morning or afternoon game this time of year ? I will be mostly nymphing so it may not matter.

As long as the water is cooler, like now, you can fish in the morning with isonychia nymphs. Impart motion to them. Short little micro-strips as they swing. You can get fish to come up to the dries in the middle of the day, provided that the water is cold, in the more isolated parts of the river. They will come right off the bottom for a size 12 iso dry with nothing on top. It can be done, but usually works best in shaded banks in medium depth water. Wet works well too.

At night, then the big fish further down river start to feed on the isos, and that lasts right into dark. For that, you want to find a spot outside the state park to stay after dark for fat browns.
