Great info on this thread. I envy those of you who are trout fishing locally in July. When dealing with micro-drag, try just adjusting your approach angle by a few feet up or down stream. Sometimes that's all it takes to get it more in the desired current. I enjoy fishing dries downstream, but also increase the ability to miss hookups from setting directly out of the fishes mouth. I feel I get a better drift, but have to use some slack and stack casts and that can hurt the accuracy of the drift.
